Many people immediately respond to the problem of evil, as stated above, by saying that the problem with the argument is that it ignores free will. The basic idea here is that at least many kinds of evil are not the result of God's actions, but of the free actions of human beings. Let's think more carefully about this.

Problem of evil 1 Problem of evil In the philosophy of religion, the problem of evil is the question of how to reconcile the existence of evil with that of a deity who is omnipotent, omniscient and omnibenevolent (see theism). [1][2] An argument from evil attempts to show that the co-existence of evil and such a deity is unlikely or impossible, and attempts to show the contrary have

Question: "What is the biblical solution to the problem of evil?" Answer: Broadly stated, the •problem of evil• is the seeming contradiction between an all-powerful, all-loving God and the human experience of suffering and evil in the world. Critics claim that the existence of evil is proof that the omnipotent, omnibenevolent God of the Bible cannot exist.

As a challenge to theism, the problem of evil has traditionally been posed in the form of a dilemma: if God is perfectly loving, he must wish to 'abolish evil'; and if he is all-powerful, he must be able to abolish evil. But evil exists; therefore God cannot be both omnipotent and perfectly loving.
