The Industrial Revolution was the transition to new manufacturing processes in Europe and the US, in the period from about 1760 to sometime between 1820 and 1840. This transition included going from hand production methods to machines, new chemical manufacturing and iron production processes, the increasing use of steam power, the development of machine tools and the rise of the factory system.

Lih and Conrad reject this long-established view. They argue that there was in fact no significant difference between Lenin's democratic dictatorship of the proletariat and peasantry, on the one hand, and Trotsky's permanent revolution, on the other, and that Lenin therefore did not have to change his views or wage an internal struggle to realign Bolshevism toward socialist revolution.
